

Support Your Local Economy!

Join us for our next Sustainable Business Pau Hana: “Green Business and Investing Locally”

Thursday, January 26, 5:30-7:30
Class Act Restaurant
Pa’ina Building, Maui College

The emerging green economy reflects profound shifts in how Americans are shopping, banking, and investing. As consumers consider the environmental, social, and governance issues of the companies making the products and services they purchase, the movement to “go green” has mainstreamed in recent years. Discover exciting opportunities to use money as a tool for social justice, community development, corporate reform, and ecological sustainability. Learn how to grow the economy through education, standards, advocacy, and investment in a free presentation with Michael Kramer and James Frazier of Hawaii’s own Natural Investments LLC.

Michael Kramer is an Accredited Investment Fiduciary, Managing Partner, and Director of Social Research at Natural Investments LLC. Michael has lived on Hawai‘i Island since 1999, where he founded the Kuleana Green Business Program of the Kona-Kohala Chamber of Commerce in 2005 as well as the Kona Earth Festival. He currently serves on the board of the Sustainability Association of Hawai‘i and the Hawai‘i Alliance for a Local Economy, and is a 20-year permaculture teacher and teacher trainer.

James Frazier is a local, green, and sustainable investing specialist with Natural Investments LLC, based in Maui and Port Townsend, WA. He is a co-founder of the Local Investing Opportunities Network (LION) of East Jefferson County, WA, and a finance graduate of the Wharton School of Business of the University of Pennsylvania. Outside the financial world, his passion for sustainable living has spurred him to explore permaculture, eco-building, natural medicine, yoga, renewable power systems, and more.
